Wilson Wasts Peace.

It is not believed here that president Wilson will persuit a forther widening of the breach between the United States and Mexico but that he will do all possible during the remainder of this year to compose the attention and restore the amicable relations which existed between the two countries during the Porfirio Diaz regime.

Although the movements of Gen. Persuing a troops still remain undisclosed, it is known here that he is re-distributing his men for a task of passively policing inn borner southward to the neighborhood of Namioulja, and the military efforts of the United States army of Mexico from now on will be centered on the prevention of radia or American rowns.

Bog Shows Only Friendship.

The Mexicans had their heads behind battered sombreros of straw and murtered to themselves. They seemed the feeling of the crowd and shivered more perhaps than the light east breeze from the hills would warrant. Then out from the shifting feet that formed just outside the roped-in enclosure between the wheels of the wagon and the guard tent came a dog. Once, perhaps, he had been regarded as a thoroughbred, for he was well lined and he carried his head well, but one leg was pulled up as if from a kick or from a throwd stone. His one time black and white hide was dirty and rumpled with the water of many a campfire battle with other army dogs for bones. He cringed as he came into the open space and slunk along on his helly. He was a pariab and he knew it. He had been a troop dog with the Sixth cavalry, but the Sixth had gone to the river and abandomed him. He sensed the loneliness of the two prisoners and in them seemed to find a common bond. Stowly he crept to where the grimy and wrinkled hand of Alvarer nervous-

BRACAMONTE IS KILLED, OBREGON WIRES CALLES

Douglas, Aris. May 25—Gen. P. Ellas Calles, military governor of Sonora, has received a message from Gen. Alvaro Obregon, Mexican minister of war, informing him that the Villista general, Bracamonic, has been killed by his own men in the state of Zacateens.

Pedro Bracamonte was well known along the border district and especially in Sonora where, with Gen. Calles, he laid seige early during the Huerta revolution, to the port of Naco, Sonora, defended by Gen, Pedro Ojeda and a federal army. Bracamonte and Calles finally captured the port after Ojeda, who had made a tremendous defence, ran out of ammunition. Bracamonte followed Villa and Calles followed Carranza after the Agusponlientes convention. lientes convention.

We are glad to serve samples of Vitalitas to callers no matter how often they come, states Mr. Moder, the Vitalitas representative at Kelly & Pollarda, "and some are coming regularly for it, three to four times per day, that is all right, and they will end by taking a supply of Vitalitas home with them."

"In practically every city where Vitalitas has been demonstrated there have been people who follow the plan of securing enough sample drinks to test Vitalitas before purchasing. It is a good scheme and El Paso people are welcome to follow it. A drink of Vitalitas consists of a tenspoonful of liquid Vitalitas in a half glass of either hot or cold water. It is wonderfully effective and even the one dose will prove beneficial. Come in today and start your free drinks and keep it up until you are satisfied."

Adolfo de la Huerta was sworn in as civil governor of Sonora today. Gen. P. Elins Calles declined to co on the change, which relieves him of civil power and haves him to command the de facto government troops in this state.
